

Fair Morning - Hymn

Fair morning, Selene, bright Lady of the moon; I give thanks for you silver light this past night and all the nights of my life. May your beauty ever bless the darkened sky.

Fair morning, Eos, delicately colored Dawn; Joyously you herald your brother's return with rose and lavender awakening the sky. May I ever find joy in your light.

Fair morning, Helios, brilliant son of Hyperion; golden is the light you bring, cradling us in your warmth. May I remember your brightness and power through this day.

Fair morning, gentle Gaia, mother to all; Loving daughter of Rhea; grant us this day your bounteous gifts and forgive us our arrogance and trespasses. Lend us your peace.

Fair morning, Zeus, son of Chronos, ruler of Olympus, father to Gods and men; grant me this day, your wisdom and law. May my clan and family be ever in your thoughts.

Fair morning, Hera, golden queen, stately ruler of Olympus; grant me just a little of your grace and poise. Bless the bonds of commitment among lovers and friends that we may never be alone.

Fair morning, Demeter, bringer of the fruits and grains of the earth which sustains us. You who teach us that all life is a cycle; for life there must be death. Bless us with your bounty for which we are thankful.

Fair morning, Apollon, my beloved Lord; I thank you for all that you have gifted me, for your love and regard. May I remember you this day finding both balance and joy.

Fair morning, Dionysos, my adored Lord; I thank you for the smiles you have given me for your blessings and for listening. May you grant that this day I have a little fun.

Fair morning, Hermes, son of Zeus; Bringer of luck, conveyer of souls, and protector. I thank you for all for swift words and ask for safe conduct for all who travel this day.

Fair morning, Aphrodite, Lady of love; I thank you for the gift of ecstasy, may you grant that I know one perfect moment of passion this day.

Fair morning, Hades, husband to bright Persephone; keeper of souls that have been freed, may you grant those who come to you this day asylum, peace and rest from the trials of life.

Fair morning, Athena, grey eyed, daughter of Zeus; I thank you for the blessings of learning crafts which brings me joy and delight. May your wisdom fill our minds this day.

Fair morning, Hecate, lady of mystery and magic. You who rein over heaven, earth and the sea. Lend me your light when I am in darkness and show me the way when I stand undecided.

Fair morning, Hephaestus, mighty smith and inventor; I thank you for all that you have given our world and ask that we may strive to do better in our endeavors this day.

Fair morning, Artemis, of the wilderness; I thank you for keeping them safe to remind us that we are a part of them too. May you grant me the sight of one of your creatures this day.

Fair morning, Persephone, daughter to Demeter; bringer of spring. Queen of the underworld I thank you for the hope you bring. May you grant knowledge of your mystery.

Fair morning, Poseidon, Shaker of the earth and lord of the oceans; grant that this day be peaceful and look kindly upon all who ply your realm. Forgive us for our trespasses.

Fair morning, Ares, son of Zeus; I thank you for the courage you inspire in me and the strength to do what's right. May you grant us all bravery and will to carry on this day no matter the challenges we face.

Fair morning, Hestia, Lady of hearth and home; I thank you for the place I live for its peace, harmony and the comforts it brings. May you grant all today a place to call their own.

Fair morning, Immortals all, where ever you dwell, Nymphs of the ocean, of spring, woods, mountains and more, this day give me and those of my kind your blessings. Let us know your grace from our first moment until our last and beyond.
